

Lifespan of Fiberglass Cable Trays

Overview

Lifespan (15-20 years): The cable tray lifespan of fiberglass trays typically ranges from 15 to 20 years. They are highly resistant to corrosion, especially in environments like sewage treatment plants, chemical processing facilities, and offshore oil rigs. Designed specifically for challenging environments where traditional materials fail—such as offshore platforms, chemical plants, and wastewater. Eaton's B-Line series fiberglass cable tray systems provide an economical support system with superior strength at room temperatures and dependable load bearing capabilities at continuously elevated temperatures. While fiberglass cable tray systems utilize a heat-cured resin that doesn't melt at. In places with high chemicals, various materials have varying durations of life. Galvanized steel is not always strong enough to sustain these spots, whereas such materials as Stainless Steel or Fiberglass (FRP) are designed to last decades. Beyond initial installation, they also deliver significant savings over the system's lifetime through reduced maintenance needs. This article will guide you through why. Enduro cable tray (sometimes called cable ladder) sets the industry standard for high-quality fiberglass cable tray.
